1. In Dresden, Freital, Pirna, and Bautzen, men aged 18 to 45 were compelled to undergo a physical examination. Some of them were told that the examination was ordered in anticipation of a draft for various professions wherein workers are urgently needed. Those examined in Dresden also were checked on their military status.
2. Summoned before the MVD in Pirna, a former submarine engineer now employed by the Sachsenwerk was asked to submit the names of former German Navy personnel, technical specialists included. In Meissen, the sister of a former submarine officer was twice interrogated by the MVD about the present location and occupation of her brother now residing in the West. She was told to inform her brother that he would not be molested if he returned and that it would be possible to find him a good position at any time.
3. In Weimar, relatives of former submarine officers were interrogated along the same lines.
